

JEM SMITH DONS THE GLOVES

HE DELIGHTS THE LONDONERS WITH SCIENTIFIC BOXING.

Fat Shady is willing to shake some of his Smith does not whip Kilauea. The big Briton, who is a champion of the ring, is now in London, and is expected to give the Londoners a good show. He is a very powerful man, and is expected to give the Londoners a good show. He is a very powerful man, and is expected to give the Londoners a good show.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Good boxing and interesting sport took place in London to-night, and many an American who prefers boxing to grand opera will be glad to read about it. It was in the Royal Aquarium, a huge glass and iron building close to the Parliament buildings, and given over to supplying amusement for crowds at a shilling a head. About 4,000 men and women crowded the floor of the building. The women were of all kinds, and of all ages, and of all complexions. The boxing there was many things to be seen. A young man came on in fighting costume, a muscular, well-built chap, Jim Young by name, and with the champion of East London for his title. Much pity was felt for him when the second man appeared. It was Jim Smith, by name, and he was a champion of the ring. He was a very powerful man, and is expected to give the Londoners a good show. Of Smith's boxing with Young not a great deal was said. It was a very powerful man, and is expected to give the Londoners a good show. He is a very powerful man, and is expected to give the Londoners a good show.

A LITERARY ADVENTURER.

LEW VANDERPOOLE AND THE GEORGE SAND MANUSCRIPTS.

Mr. Schlicht, the publisher of the Cosmopolitan, on returning from Oyster Bay late last night, after Vanderpoole's arrest, made the following statement to a Sun reporter: "We had known Mr. Vanderpoole for over a year by correspondence, but had engaged no literary work from him until about a month ago he offered us the 'last and unpublished novel' of George Sand, translated from the original manuscript in his possession by himself. He told us that the reason it had not been published was that it was too long, and that it would have been dangerous to publish the story before the original died, which he conveniently did a short time since.

"The romance was duly announced. Soon after this announcement several persons, including Mr. Schlicht, called on Mr. Vanderpoole, and he told them that the manuscript was in his possession, and that he would publish it. AN ANTI-CLEVELAND BODY.

MASSACHUSETTS DEMOCRATS MEET IN CONVENTION.

Worcester, Sept. 20.—On the surface to-day's Convention of the Bay State Democracy was the most harmonious political gathering that ever met in Mechanics' Hall. Not a word was spoken beyond what was necessary to the business of the Convention. The delegates assembled to dispose of. Under a very strict party discipline, however, there was waiting to burst forth a lava torrent of protest, discontent and denunciation. Until late last night there seemed to be no hope of preventing a tremendous anti-Cleveland demonstration on the floor of the Convention. It was to plain what the effect would be that even the staunchest Cleveland men were willing to make almost any concession in order to ward off the calamity. Patrick Maguire and his friends were able and ready to make such an attack upon the administration as to cause the delegates to be so much alarmed that they were willing to make almost any concession in order to ward off the calamity.

There is no shadow of doubt that the malcontents could have carried through any plan they chose to adopt. They demanded as the price of their silence the most humiliating of all concessions, and they got it. They demanded a plank in the platform which should condemn the civil service policy of the Administration as executed in Massachusetts. The third plank of the platform, therefore, contains a resolution which is a complete condemnation of the civil service policy of the Administration as executed in Massachusetts.

The convention for the gubernatorial nomination was held in the evening. The delegates were divided into two factions, the one of which was the more moderate, and the other was the more radical.
